

Mike

I recently attended two black history lessons and went to these because I believe that for a better tomorrow, we constantly need to educate ourselves.

It did leave me feeling there is a lot more that each and every one of us should be doing to raise awareness and to bring about change.

Donna and Lucia

We thought the primary school lesson was fantastic.

We loved how it was interactive, it was engaging and most of all it was thought provoking.

I'm really proud to work at Aviva, supporting the education on Black History for its employees and their families

Was there anything that surprised you, Lucia?

Yes, so they took people from their homes, even little children.

Sent them to America to work as slaves and be split up from their families.

They weren't even allowed to talk their language which was very sad.
